A widely recognized trial lawyer, Michael is known for his precedent-setting wins in “bet-the-industry” intellectual property disputes involving the streaming of motion picture, television, and music properties. His matters are frequently at the core of disputes arising from a digital media evolution that intersects at the crossroads of Silicon Valley and Hollywood. This winning experience has made him “the go-to litigator in new media law in the country” (The American Lawyer) and the “go-to attorney in digital copyright cases” (Chambers USA).

Michael serves as the firm-wide vice chairman. Michael and his core team have collectively tried more than 100 cases to verdict, including high-profile and precedent-setting disputes involving major entertainment and digital media companies, representing the defense of billions of dollars in liability and the recovery of massive awards for Winston clients. Clients are impressed by his “uncanny ability to develop and execute winning trial strategies in tough, complex commercial disputes,” as well as his “terrific litigation skills” and “incredibly hard-working” approach (Chambers USA). Michael was named to “Hall of Fame – Copyright” by The Legal 500 US (2021–2023), and he was recognized by Law360 as a “Media & Entertainment MVP” (2021), which noted that his “outcomes frequently test the boundaries of the nascent new media environment.”

Michael leads a Winston team in trial and appellate courts in three separate proceedings in different parts of the United States, defending some of the largest internet service providers against secondary copyright infringement claims (involving multibillion-dollar exposure) brought by nearly the entirety of the music industry arising alleged residential and business subscriber file sharing. The same Winston team has been responsible for some of the biggest and high-profile trial and appellate wins which have shaped the boundaries of numerous aspects of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act.

Michael is truly a pioneer in complex and precedent-setting digital copyright matters. Notably, he has earned three “Litigator of the Week” honors from Am Law as a result of his success in three separate “bet-the-industry” digital media copyright disputes involving the streaming of motion picture, television, and music properties. In February 2018, Michael convinced the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to reverse a copyright infringement jury verdict (in a case tried by another firm) and remand the case for a new trial. This win in a crucial copyright fight demonstrates the reason clients say that Michael “thinks on his feet and knows strategy” (Chambers USA).

In another case for which he received “Litigator of the Week” honors—one of the most closely watched digital media copyright cases of the last several years—Michael secured the denial of a motion for preliminary injunction that had been filed against Aereo, Inc., a digital media venture. The plaintiffs, comprised of 17 television broadcast networks, sued Aereo for copyright infringement based upon Aereo’s transformative mobile streaming television technology. The decision was affirmed on appeal and was featured by Am Law Litigation Daily as one of its “IP Wins Worth Bragging About,” as well as by The Hollywood Reporter as “Deal of the Year.”

Michael first earned “Litigator of the Week” for his lower court wins and successful defense on appeal of a series of cases for Veoh Networks that first applied and tested the applicability of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act section 512(c) safe harbor protection to website owners and operators that offer user-generated content. This appellate victory was recognized by Corporate Counsel as one of its “10 Biggest IP Litigation Wins” of the year.

These headline-grabbing wins have made him the go-to litigator in digital media law in the country. World Trademark Review recently noted: “Michael Elkin is a leading light in the digital media and entertainment space.” In previous editions, WTR recognized that Michael “is on home turf when high-stakes trademark and copyright issues collide in the courtroom. Those in the entertainment and digital media domains can rest easy in his eminently capable hands.”

His exceptional work has led to many other accolades over the years. Under his leadership, the firm’s copyright practice was referenced prominently in the 2014 IP Litigation Department of the Year review by The American Lawyer, and Michael was specifically recognized for his handling of leading digital media cases in the entertainment space. Michael’s digital media work also earned him an “Intellectual Property MVP” (2012) recognition by Law360.

The Legal 500 US named Michael to its copyright “Hall of Fame” in 2021–2023, calling him “an authority in litigation involving motion picture, television, and music properties.” One client notes that Michael and his team are “the best litigators I have ever worked with over my nearly 45 years in business. [The team is] very aggressive in representing our interests.” Another client states, “We have worked with the team led by Michael Elkin on complex copyright litigation, the details of which break new ground in the social media space.”

Law360 also selected Winston as a “Media and Entertainment Group of the Year,” citing Winston’s record in cases that helped determine the legal standard for user-generated content and copyright infringement. Further, U.S. News & World Report once again ranked Winston as national Tier 1 for IP Litigation in its “Best Law Firms” issue, with one client stating: “In the four companies I have been CEO of, I have dealt with many IP/Litigation firms. Michael Elkin at Winston & Strawn is the very best in this area.”

Complementing his extraordinary copyright litigation skills, Michael also has significant experience representing digital media service providers in royalty rate-setting proceedings, including (for clients such as Amazon) before the Copyright Royalty Board, to determine the appropriate licensing rates for the creation and distribution of content. His deep knowledge of U.S. copyright laws, as well as the IP challenges inherent in the digital media and entertainment sector, make him uniquely well qualified to handle these types of matters.

In addition to being one of the most sought-after media and entertainment attorneys in the country, Michael is also an experienced patent, trademark, and trade secret litigator. His experience includes representing a manufacturer of flash memory cards in an International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) arbitration involving claims of misappropriation of confidential information and trade secrets; winning a significant victory for a consumer electronics company in a patent litigation case involving failure to pay royalties for use of patents in selling DVD players; and representing a leading broker-dealer firm in one of the largest and most high-profile of Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA) arbitrations.

Michael also advises and counsels entertainment clients on capital markets transactions and licensing of intellectual property. His international experience includes private litigation and arbitration that required the application of treaties, conventions, and foreign and domestic law on subjects such as the extraterritorial gathering of evidence, foreign sovereign immunity, recognition of foreign country judgments and foreign arbitral awards, and international conflicts of law.

Prior to joining Winston & Strawn, Michael served as vice chairman of another major law firm and managing partner of its litigation practice.

Key Matters

Michael's practice has helped define the boundaries and landscape of IP law regarding the development, distribution, and use of emerging technologies. He advises cable and tech companies on new, over-the-top technologies for internet distribution, and has successfully defended new media in game-changing disputes, including cases involving the streaming of motion pictures, television, and music properties.

Notable examples of his work in this area include:

- Secured dismissal of a vicarious copyright infringement claim brought by the music industry against one of the largest internet service providers ("ISP") in the United States that sought a billion dollar plus damages award for the alleged infringing activities of the ISP's subscribers.
- In a two-week jury trial where 25 music publishers sought to recover US$30M in statutory damages for established copyright infringement against an interactive music streaming site and its owners, Michael led a Winston team to limit the verdict to just US$189,000 (nearly the absolute floor of a permitted recovery).
- Served as special counsel to the trustee in the bankruptcy of VidAngel, an online video filter and streaming service, providing counsel to the trustee concerning business streaming models of the company against which a US$62.5M judgment had been entered.
- For one of the largest cable companies in the United States, secured a reversal on appeal to the Fourth Circuit (and remand for a new trial) of a jury verdict awarding US$25M on secondary copyright infringement (in a case tried by another firm).
- Obtained important wins for a website providing access to what The Wall Street Journal described as "the most important collection of rock memorabilia and recordings ever assembled in one business," including in a copyright matter involving the late impresario's estate and numerous copyright infringement cases brought by music publishing companies and the surviving members/representatives of Led Zeppelin, the Grateful Dead, The Doors, Santana, and Nirvana.
- Won, and successfully defended on appeal, a series of cases for Veoh Networks that first applied and tested the applicability of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act section 512(c) safe harbor protection to website owners and operators that offer user-generated content. Illustrating the significance of this win, a ruling awarding summary judgment to YouTube in a similar highly anticipated copyright infringement case in the Southern District of New York adopted much of the Winston team's key legal arguments that prevailed in the Veoh case.
- Secured the denial of a motion for preliminary injunction that had been filed against Aereo, Inc., a digital media venture. The plaintiffs, comprised of 17 television broadcast networks, sued Aereo for copyright infringement based upon Aereo's transformative mobile streaming television technology. The decision was affirmed on appeal.

- Won a landmark victory for Yahoo! in a decision issued by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit that addressed a series of lower court decisions on music downloading and reasonable royalties. Yahoo! replaced its trial counsel and retained Winston to handle a motion for reconsideration (which initially reduced the judgment by millions of dollars) and this appeal before the Second Circuit. The decision will have far-reaching implications for how performing rights societies like ASCAP will be compensated for the incidental use of their constituent publishers' music that passes through Internet portals, like Yahoo! – and countless others.
- Won a decision of unique importance for Yahoo! subsidiary Launch Media Inc. in a copyright infringement battle in which up to US$2 billion in potential damages was claimed. In the first ruling of its kind, the Second Circuit affirmed the jury verdict in our client's favor and held that personalized webcasting sites do not give listeners enough control over what songs are played to qualify as interactive sites, as the music label plaintiffs had argued.
- Secured a dismissal for Yahoo! at the district court level in a lawsuit brought by prize insurer SCA Promotions over Yahoo's decision not to continue with a "Tourney Pick 'Em" promotion for the 2014 NCAA Men's Division I Basketball Tournament that would have paid the winner US$1 billion for correctly predicting each of the tournament's 63 games.
- Won a summary judgment motion for Myxer, the leader in ad-supported mobile entertainment, in a bet-the-industry copyright infringement lawsuit brought by several of the world's largest record companies alleging that Myxer is violating copyrights by allowing its users to create ring tones based on the plaintiffs' copyrighted works.
