

Energy 2009: Are we going down the right track? Can we afford this approach? Will it get us where we need to go?

The partners of Winston & Strawn's Energy Practice invite you to join a select group of senior professionals in the energy sector on Tuesday, September 22, 2009 for an in-depth collaborative roundtable discussion of the following:

What Is the Current Status of the Stimulus Package?

- What actions has the Administration taken to date?
- What is the status of the DOE grants—how can they be accessed?
- ITC versus PTC versus grants—which is best?
- Which energy resources stand the best chance of benefiting?
- Are we making the right choices to achieve our energy independence and climate change objectives?
- Will financing be available (i.e. private equity, foreign direct investment, etc.)?

What Should We Expect Next From the Government?

- Are additional financial/tax incentives expected?
- Should we expect a federal cap and trade system, a carbon tax, or both?
- How will federal governmental programs interface with state programs?
- Will there be a federal renewable energy standard?
- Renewable versus fossil versus nuclear generation—what makes sense?
- Who is likely to develop and finance energy resources?

The discussions will be moderated by Winston & Strawn partners Jonathan Birenbaum, Jerry Bloom, John Lorentzen, Jim Miller, Greg Pavin and Andy Ratts.

Who Should Attend?

Financial investors, strategic investors, energy executives, developers of alternative energy technology, and other leaders involved in the energy sector.

We look forward to having you attend.
