The publication highlights Kathi's career—she was an engineer before she practiced law—and her role as a co-leader of Winston's Disruptive Technology Task Team, a one-stop resource for comprehensive legal advice related to disruptive technologies such as distributed ledger technology (DLT), digital currencies, artificial intelligence (AI), and the internet of things (IoT).

Recently Winston achieved a favorable settlement with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) that included no financial penalty for a client that completed an unregistered initial coin offering, the cryptocurrency equivalent of an IPO.
