

Cari Stinebower Discusses New U.S. Sanctions on Russia with Bloomberg

AUGUST 15, 2019

Winston & Strawn White Collar, Regulatory Defense & Investigations partner Cari Stinebower was quoted in Bloomberg's article "Guide to New U.S. Sanctions: What Was Forbidden to Do with the State Debt of the Russian Federation." The article discusses the now-likely inability of the Federation to be able to issue bonds in dollars.

Cari, who focuses on economic sanctions, export controls, and anti-money laundering, is a former counsel for the U.S. Department of the Treasury's Office of Foreign Assets Control. Cari explained in the article, which noted that Winston advises on Eurobonds placement deals, that "...it will be difficult to issue sovereign Eurobonds in Russian dollars, but placements in other currencies are possible."

The article says that in theory, sanctions can make it difficult to manage a portfolio of international reserves.

1 Min Read

Related Locations

Washington, DC

Related Topics

Economic Sanctions

International Trade

International Trade, Customs & Export Controls

Related Capabilities

International Trade

White Collar & Government Investigations

Related Regions

North America

Related Professionals

---

Cari Stinebower