

Top 10 Privacy Changes in 2019 & Navigating Privacy Compliance in 2020

JANUARY 21, 2020

In 2019, companies continued to face new privacy challenges as they work to comply with new laws and mitigate risk. Over the past 12 months, several sweeping new privacy laws have been enacted or been enforced (including GDPR and CCPA), new technologies such as AI, IoT and facial recognition posed new opportunities and liabilities, and companies faced continued threats under TCPA and BIPA litigation. The privacy landscape continues to change with other states looking to pass new privacy laws, the U.S. Federal government wrestling with assuming broad privacy regulations, and looming agency enforcements. Companies also continued to face data security issues with breaches on the rise, new breach notification law requirements, and thriving data security litigation.

In this live and interactive webinar, members of Winston's Global Privacy Task Force, Alessandra Swanson, Sean Wieber, and Eric Shinabarger, highlighted 2019 privacy impacts that should be on your radar and discussed what privacy issues to expect in the year to come.
