

Sanctions Environment

NOVEMBER 5, 2020

Presidents have long used sanctions as a foreign policy tool. One question business leaders are grappling with is how the sanctions environment will change in a Biden administration. While there will likely be some continuity with the current sanctions approach, there will also be differences, including, potentially:

- Greater collaboration with Japan and South Korea regarding China
- Partnering with the EU in a possible resumption of nuclear negotiations with Iran
- Continued focus on human rights violations and corresponding Global Magnitsky Sanctions
- A rolling back of certain restrictions on Cuba.
- An expectation of continuity on policy and sanctions relating to North Korea and Venezuela

For further information or questions on the above, please contact Cari Stinebower or your Winston relationship attorney.

Less Than 1 Min Read

Author

Cari Stinebower

Related Locations

Washington, DC

Related Topics

Sanctions

Related Regions

North America

Related Professionals

Cari Stinebower

This entry has been created for information and planning purposes. It is not intended to be, nor should it be substituted for, legal advice, which turns on specific facts.