

Oral Advocacy at its Finest: Circuit Judge Kimberly Moore and District Court Judge Alan Albright Discuss What Works (and Doesn't)

APRIL 5, 2021

The Berkeley Center for Law & Technology and the Federal Circuit Bar Association hosted a panel discussion on oral advocacy.

Whether you are an associate or a junior lawyer looking for insights into what is most helpful to judges or tips on the best ways to advance your positions and win for your clients, Federal Circuit Judge Kimberly Moore and District Court Judge Alan Albright shared their views.

Both judges had illustrious careers before joining the bench: Judge Moore as an engineer, advocate, and well-known, prolific professor and Judge Albright as a magistrate judge, trial lawyer, and advocate. The judges go out of their way to mentor and guide junior advocates and are coming together to share their views.

The panel was moderated by Winston & Strawn Silicon Valley Managing Partner and District Court and Federal Circuit advocate Kathi Vidal.

Highlights from the panel can be found in the American Lawyer Skilled in the Art column here.

1 Min Read

Related Locations

Silicon Valley

Related Capabilities

Patent Litigation

Intellectual Property

Related Regions

North America

Related Professionals

Kathi Vidal