

An Outline of China's PIPL Requirements for Online Videogame Companies

SEPTEMBER 3, 2021

In an article for Law360, Winston Of Counsel Jacob Harding outlines the challenges China's new Personal Information Protection Law (PIPL) poses for the online videogame industry—especially for videogame companies outside China. Read about the requirements under this new regulation and the steps companies can take now to avoid penalties in the full article.

About Winston's Videogame, Gaming & Esports Group

Recognizing that emerging industries require bespoke lawyering, David Enzminger formed and leads Winston's Videogame, Gaming & Esports Group to provide comprehensive legal solutions to companies in these industries. This multidisciplinary group includes more than 60 lawyers across 10 practices working seamlessly to assist companies in these industries in all areas, including managing IP portfolios, assisting esports companies establish global sports leagues, selling franchises, and developing proactive legal solutions for issues that arise from league operations. We represent videogame publishers in antitrust matters and represent both rights owners and gaming companies in licensing issues for game content. In addition, our team helps electronic game clients prepare for all types of regulatory and public scrutiny issues, such as corporate governance, data privacy, and harassment/discrimination claims that are sure to come as the industry continues to grow in both size and influence. Our offices in New York, Silicon Valley, Los Angeles, Shanghai, and Hong Kong provide gaming clients with a global platform for their complex and evolving legal needs.

1 Min Read

Author

Jacob Harding

Related Topics

Videogames

This entry has been created for information and planning purposes. It is not intended to be, nor should it be substituted for, legal advice, which turns on specific facts.