

SPAC: New Trends in France and Europe

OCTOBER 5, 2021

This article was originally published in M&A Review. Reprinted with permission. Any opinions in this article are not those of Winston & Strawn or its clients. The opinions in this article are the author's opinions only.

The European SPAC market, understood as the market on which SPACs are being launched and listed, does not seem to suffer the consequences of the excesses of the U.S. market and could even benefit from an increased interest from investors used to that kind of products. Between January and the end of August 2021, 26 SPACs were launched on European stock markets, i.e., five times more than during previous years.

Far from the U.S. figures that turn heads, the European SPAC market is booming and continues its development (re)started in 2019, at a pace admittedly slower but steady and, above all, untroubled. New trends have thus appeared since the end of 2020 regarding the conditions and the structuring of European SPACs.

Read the full article here.

1 Min Read

Author

Annie Maudouit-Ridde

Related Locations

Paris

Related Topics

Special Purpose Acquisition Companies (SPACs)

France

Related Capabilities

Mergers & Acquisitions

Related Regions

Europe

Related Professionals

Annie Maudouit-Ridde