

Cari Stinebower Discusses Russian Sanctions in The Wall Street Journal

JANUARY 31, 2022

Winston & Strawn Partner Cari Stinebower, who focuses her practice on International Trade, spoke with The Wall Street Journal about the potential economic impact U.S. and non-U.S. companies may face should the Biden administration and allies impose sanctions in response to a Russian attack on Ukraine.

Cari suggests that companies, regardless of their headquarters, with interests in Russia “assess their risk exposure based on targets proposed in sanctions legislation and draft a memorandum on the findings,” adding that “businesses shouldn’t delay in touching base with government officials to express their concerns and to seek guidance.”

Read the full article here (subscription required).

Less Than 1 Min Read

Related Locations

Washington, DC

Related Topics

Wall Street Journal

Economic Sanctions

Russia

Ukraine

Related Capabilities

International Trade

Related Regions

North America

Europe

Related Professionals

---

Cari Stinebower