

What Is Disruptive Technology?

Disruptive Technology

Disruptive technology is defined as new technologies or products that aim to improve and make efficient how traditional industries operate. Given their rapid pace of innovation and application, they often lack regulation and operate within a continuously evolving legal landscape. Recent examples of disruptive technologies include autonomous vehicles, blockchain, cryptocurrency, and artificial intelligence.

To learn more about disruptive technologies, visit the Disruptive Technology Legal Resource Hub.

Related Capabilities

Cryptocurrencies, Digital Assets & Blockchain Technology

Technology, Media & Telecommunications