

Once Alone, Now Empowered

FEBRUARY 28, 2022

This article was originally published in Texas Lawbook. Any opinions in this article are not those of Winston & Strawn or its clients. The opinions in this article are the author's opinions only.

I grew up in a rather diverse school district and never felt out of place until I had AP English, where I was one of few Black students. For the first time, I felt uncomfortable around people I considered friends.

Not because they did anything wrong but because I became aware that my Blackness would somehow make me a mouthpiece for the Black experience with every cultural novel we read. I wanted no part of that.

View the full article here.

1 Min Read

Related Locations

Dallas

Related Topics

Diversity, Equity & Inclusion

Related Regions

North America

Related Professionals

Ashley Wright