MAY 16, 2023

Winston & Strawn recently announced the addition of Rodney Moore and Sam Peca to the firm's Dallas office, where they joined as partners in the Transactions Department's Private Equity Transactions Practice.

Rodney represents private equity firms and public and private companies in M&A, joint venture, financing, and other commercial transactions across the energy spectrum, including in the traditional upstream and midstream sectors, as well as in the evolving transitional energy sectors such as hydrogen, renewable fuels, and carbon capture. He also advises clients on corporate governance matters, transactional and corporate matters in out of court, and Chapter 11 restructurings.

Sam advises private equity firms, private and public companies, and management teams, primarily in energy- and infrastructure-related transactions. His experience covers upstream acquisitions, divestitures, joint development arrangements, and PDP securitization and royalty deals; midstream acquisitions, divestitures, and joint ventures; various energy transition projects (especially those involving hydrogen technologies); produced water disposal; the formation of private equity-backed, sponsor-, and management-side platforms; and corporate matters in connection with various restructurings and Chapter 11 proceedings (including 363 sales).

"Adding Rodney and Sam to our team enhances Winston's position in Texas as one of the strongest firms for handling transactions in the energy sector," said Dallas Office Managing Partner Bryan Goolsby in the press release announcing their arrival. "We look forward to their contributions as we help our clients navigate and thrive in the oil and gas and evolving transitional energy space."
