Courtney focuses her practice on complex litigation, investigations, and appeals.

She has defended clients in class action, multidistrict, and complex commercial litigation against claims of unfair and deceptive trade practices, breach of contract, fraud, and defective products, among others. Her experience ranges from internal investigations to initial pleadings, written discovery, document review, fact and expert witness preparation, critical motions, and briefing on appeal. Courtney is skilled at navigating complex areas of law and drafting clear, effective arguments.

Before joining the firm, Courtney collaborated on high-stakes civil and criminal appeals in the U.S. Supreme Court, Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, and state supreme and appellate courts as an extern for the North Carolina Office of the Solicitor General.
