On November 14, 2023, Neely Agin, co-chair of Winston’s Antitrust and Competition Transactions Practice, will speak at GCR Live: Women in Antitrust 2023 in Washington, D.C. The annual conference brings together outstanding women professionals in competition law, including practitioners, enforcers, economists, and in-house counsel.

Neely’s panel, titled “Deal Uncertainty, New Challenges, and Divergence in Mergers,” will cover the increasing unpredictability of merger assessments due to evolving thresholds, varied timelines, and changing filing requirements, as well as divergent outcomes in merger cases across jurisdictions. Panelists will discuss the substantial overhaul of the HSR filing process contemplated by U.S. agencies and the increasing need for thorough preparation by companies and their counsel. They’ll address the rising influence of public interest and political factors in M&A globally, including the growing focus on FDI and subsidy considerations. Speakers will explore these sources of deal uncertainty and provide insights on how to effectively navigate the regulatory clearance landscape.
