Louis represents clients in federal income taxation with an emphasis on a range of tax credits; community development programs; environmental, safety, and health issues; real estate lending, and development; renewable energy; oil and gas; mergers and acquisitions; and the structuring and formation of complex partnerships with tax-exempt, U.S. taxable and foreign investors.

He is active in the tax aspects, policy issues, and related incentives of the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA), including in advising clients with respect to foreign entity of concern issues and compliance with Section 30D and electric vehicle related incentives, as well as changes to the energy investment tax credit under Section 48 (and new Section 48E). He has experience in solar, critical minerals, battery storage, microgrids, electrochromic windows, biomass, biogas, wind, geothermal, and other related sectors involving investors, developers, and lenders. He has also been involved in transfers of tax credits under Section 6418 and the various new prevailing wage and apprenticeship requirements created under the IRA. Additionally, he has represented various municipalities and tax-exempt entities related to Section 6417 and the new direct pay option for tax credits under the IRA.

Additionally, Louis has extensive experience structuring various tax-advantaged investments for tax equity investors, and others, including structures for the monetization of real estate related tax credits totaling approximately US$4B, as well as a variety of structured finance transactions. These projects have involved low-income housing tax credits, new markets tax credits, and historic tax credits.

In the energy industry, Louis focuses on oil and gas transactions, master limited partnerships (including formation, public debt and equity offerings, and operation), asset acquisitions and dispositions, services, pipelines, refineries and other downstream transactions, and joint ventures. He also advises clients in the development of, and investments in, a range of renewable energy and energy transition projects, electric vehicles, advanced manufacturing facilities, incentives, programs, and tax credits.
