Matt is the immediate past U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia and a distinguished trial lawyer, who leverages his exceptional legal acumen to represent entities and individuals in complex criminal, civil, and regulatory matters.

Matt is a highly skilled investigator and trial lawyer, who, in addition to leading the largest U.S. Attorney's Office in the country, also previously served as a prosecutor in that office, and as a partner at an international law firm where he represented clients in civil litigation and in matters before the Department of Justice (DOJ) and other government entities. Matt draws on these varied and unique experiences to represent individual and corporate clients in complex investigations involving claimed violations of, including, among others, sanctions, export control, securities, health care, anti-money laundering, and anti-fraud laws. His experience extends to helping clients navigate the intricate and ever-changing regulatory landscape in myriad investigation and enforcement matters initiated by federal or state authorities. These include matters involving the False Claims Act (FCA), Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), sanctions and export controls, and the Foreign Agents Registration Act (FARA).

Matt's extensive trial and litigation experience is another cornerstone of his practice. He leverages his invaluable experience and unique insight as a former U.S. Attorney and career prosecutor—who has personally tried nearly 50 cases to verdict and overseen hundreds of other trials—to represent clients in a variety of complex cases. His unparalleled ability to dissect complex legal issues and present compelling arguments has earned him the reputation with his clients as a trusted advisor and advocate in a wide range of legal and regulatory challenges.

In his former role as U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia, Matt led a team of roughly 950 attorneys and professional support staff who handled tens of thousands of cases during his tenure. Matt oversaw both criminal and civil matters addressing large-scale financial misconduct, including ground-breaking sanctions resolutions, the largest forfeiture in DOJ's history, and what is believed to be the largest FCA procurement fraud settlement in history.

Matt served the U.S. Attorney's Office for nearly a decade in several other capacities, including as the Acting Chief of the Fraud and Public Corruption Section. There, he supervised and led white-collar crime investigations involving complex violations of securities regulations, health care statutes, the FCPA, export control laws, anti-money laundering provisions, and various anti-fraud measures, handling some of the Section's most significant cases, including prosecutions of business organizations that resulted in billions in monetary penalties.

Matt formerly practiced as a partner at a premier international law firm where he drew upon his substantial trial experience to handle a wide array of civil matters and represented clients before DOJ and other government entities. He also served as an associate at another global law firm where he focused his practice on securities and litigation matters.

Matt served as a law clerk for the Honorable Richard W. Roberts of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.
