

Jason Moore

Attorney

Washington, DC
+1 202-282-5667

Jason is a senior e-Discovery attorney whose practice focuses on helping clients manage complex e-discovery issues, including litigation readiness, preservation obligations, analytic document review technologies, reasonable and proportional discovery efforts, deposition preparation, and discovery sanctions.

A career litigator who has handled all aspects of a case from inception to trial, Jason has advised Fortune 100 clients concerning electronic and document discovery in the context of antitrust litigation, complex commercial litigation, health care litigation, product liability litigation, and regulatory and government investigations. He specializes in leveraging advanced analytics and review technologies, including machine learning-based Technology Assisted Review and Large Language Model Artificial Intelligence, to reduce his clients' e-discovery burden, maximize efficiency, and reduce error, as well as helping clients navigate complex issues related to data preservation and spoliation sanctions. Jason is Lead Editor of Winston & Strawn's eDiscovery Advantage newsletter and its well-regarded annual E-Discovery Case Law Year-in-Review client alert, which summarize significant judicial decisions and developments that impact the practices of e-discovery, information governance, and privacy. Jason also has a strong interest in pro bono representation and has assisted clients in a variety of matters, including free speech and whistleblower protection litigation, free exercise litigation, litigation over incarceration conditions, and counseling elderly clients on end of life and living will planning.
