

OSHA Issues Final Rule Amending Regulation on Recording and Reporting Occupational Injuries and Illness

MAY 25, 2016

The U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) recently published a final rule amending its regulation on Recording and Reporting Occupational Injuries and Illnesses. Under the final rule, certain employers must now electronically submit annual records of work-related injuries and illness to OSHA. The final rule also requires all employers to: establish reasonable procedures for employees to report work-related injuries and illness, and inform employees of their right to report such incidents from discrimination and retaliation.

For more details, view our Labor & Employment Practice briefing.

Less Than 1 Min Read

Author

Eleni Kouimelis

Related Locations

Washington, DC

Related Topics

OSHA

Rulemaking

Related Capabilities

Environmental

Related Regions

Related Professionals

Eleni Kouimelis

This entry has been created for information and planning purposes. It is not intended to be, nor should it be substituted for, legal advice, which turns on specific facts.