John is a trial lawyer with significant courtroom experience in both federal and state courts as well as arbitrations. His practice focuses on complex commercial litigation for corporations and individuals across a wide variety of industries, as well as internal investigations and white collar criminal defense.

John represents clients at all stages of litigation and has extensive dispositive motion, deposition, oral argument, and trial experience, and works closely with witnesses to prepare them for deposition and trial testimony. John has served as a key member of multiple trial teams, including second chair experience, making an opening statement, and examining witnesses. John frequently represents clients in matters involving breach of contract, fraud, trade secrets, fiduciary duties, the False Claims Act, class actions, and other business disputes and regulatory matters. His experience also includes obtaining injunctive relief, providing pre-litigation and regulatory counseling, engaging in alternative dispute resolution proceedings, and obtaining favorable settlements.

John was previously selected to serve as an Assistant District Attorney at the Dallas County District Attorneys' Office through its lawyer on loan program where he tried multiple criminal jury trials to verdict, handling everything from voir dire through closing argument. John maintains an active pro bono practice with a variety of commercial and civil rights matters, and during law school served as an intern to the Honorable Robert E. Gerber, United States Bankruptcy Judge for the Southern District of New York.
