

“Liking” Social Media in the Workplace

JUNE 12, 2013

Winston & Strawn hosted an eLunch titled “‘Liking’ Social Media in the Workplace: How to Create a Social Media Policy that Protects You and Respects the Rights of Your Employees” on Wednesday, June 12, 2013 at 12:15 – 1:30 p.m. (Central).

Whether you like it or not, social media has invaded the workplace. In this session, we discussed how to draft a social media policy that protects you, doesn’t incur the wrath of the NLRB, and complies with the latest legislation. We also discussed best practices for managing employee use of social media in the workplace and coordinating your social media policy with other workplace policies, including anti-harassment and anti-discrimination policies, timekeeping policies, and confidentiality policies.

Winston & Strawn attorney Jason Campbell presented a practical and interactive program that focused on:

- The objectives of a social media policy
- Risks and benefits of using social media in the workplace
