

Danielle F. Young

Of Counsel

Los Angeles
+1 213-615-1764

Danielle focuses her practice on representing financing parties and tax equity investors in connection with the development and financing of renewable energy projects involving wind and solar power and storage projects throughout the United States.

She has worked on a number of renewable energy projects involving wind and solar power and storage projects throughout the country, including complex transactions involving construction financing, term loan financing, back-leverage financing, bridge financing, mezzanine financing, portfolio financings, community solar financings, storage financings, tax equity partnership flip transactions and inverted lease transactions. Danielle also has significant tax experience advising partnerships and corporations on tax issues in foreign and domestic transactions, including multi-jurisdictional mergers, acquisitions and restructurings.

Danielle served on the firm's Associates Committee and Recruiting Committee, and she also is a member of the Winston Asian Leadership Initiative.

Danielle has experience working in the financial services industry and the federal government. Danielle worked at Ernst & Young LLP where she advised companies on international, federal, and state and local matters. She also worked as an attorney investigator for the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, where she investigated employment discrimination claims and negotiated disputes to prevent employment discrimination.
